

The case of UNIVERSITAS STUDORIUM POLONA VILNENSIS
Erzsébet Debreceni

The aim of research: to study and analyze the university Universitas Studium Polona Vilnensis, which is working in capital of Lithuania

The main results of research: Case study about an eastern European country's higher education for minority groups and contribution to creation of a concept of higher education policy for minority groups. The case study will be form in the next intersections: the genesis of university, the existence of university, the services of university, the composition, structure of students of university, the ideas of development of university, the professional network of university, the professional profile of university, finance of university.

The methodology of research: Make some interviews at the beginning of the process of research without strict questions then with concrete questions in order to outcrop information, what we need about the formation, existence, professional work, finance, plan of development of Universitas Studium Polona Vilnensis. In the course of research we will study additionally on statistics of polish minority group by near to Universitas Studium Polona Vilnensis. The process and analyse of results of research are supported by teamwork.

The pedagogical/educational political importance of research: draft about a professional know-how of identity preserver, community constructive project in the frame of higher education.